Genscher's Party Losing Assembly Seats in State Vote

FRANKFURT — The Free Democratic Party, which quit the federal government on Sept. 17, was heading for the worst electoral defeat in its history Sanday in elec-tions in the state of Hesse, accord-ing to first computer projections.

The small liberal party led by Hans-Dietrich Genscher, the for-mer foreign minister, was winning only 3.1 percent of the vote a half-bour after the poils closed, not enough to keep seats in the state assembly in Wiesbaden. The Free Democratic Party has agreed to vote with the conserva-(lower house) in Bonn on Friday to unsent Chancellor Heimut Schmidt and elect Helmut Kohl leader of the conservative Chris-tian Democratic Union, as chan-cellor of a center-right coalition.

But Sunday's vote, in a cam-paign dominated by national polipage dominated by hadonal poli-nics, seemed sure to weaken Mr. Genscher's position in his own party and in policy talks this week with the Christian Democrats and their Bavarian sister party, the Christian Social Union.

Political analysts said that wavering liberal deputies in Bonn might now think twice before voting to replace Mr. Schmidt. Greens Hold Balance

The Christian Democrats appeared to be heading the Hesse poll with 45 percent of the vote, closely tailed by Mr. Schmidt's So-cial Democrats — who have ruled Hesse for 36 years - with 44.6

The initial projection was a drastic blow for the Free Democrats, deeply split over Mr. Genscher's decision to abandon Mr. Schmidt and seek a coalition with the conservatives.

In June of this year, four months before the collapse of the federal coalition, the Free Democrats in Hesse decided to switch to the Christian Democrats, ending the last left-liberal alliance remaining outside Bonn. The split was caused by Social Democratic support for a surface on higher-income. surtax on higher-income earners in the state, whose industry is con-centrated around Frankfurt, West

In the 1978 election, the Social state assembly seats while the Christian Democrats won 53. But the Social Democrats were able to stay in power by continuing their 1970 alliance with the Free Democrats, who took seven seats.

Spectacular Recovery

The Social Democratic score, almost identical to that of the last Hesse election, showed that the chancellor's party had staged a spectacular recovery since the Free Democrats walked out on Mr.

Mr. Schmidt had urged voters to punish the Free Democrats for their "betrayal in Bonn," telling electors that every vote for his par-ty would help his campaign for an immediate general election to re-solve the Bonn crisis.

The projected result would leave the state without a majority gov-ernment. It means that the Christian Democratic national vice chairman, Alfred Dregger, would be unlikely to take over as state premier from Holger Börner, a So-cial Democrat and close friend of Mr. Schmidt, and that the Social Democratic Party could try to rule with a minority government.

Begin Reported Ready To Accept High-Level Inquiry Into Massacres

Washington Part Service

JERUSALEM — Amid deepening political trouble for his defense minister, Ariel Sharon, Prime Minister Menachem Begin was reported Sunday as being ready to surrender to the demand that a state judicial board of inquiry be established to investigate the massacre of Palestinian refugees in Israelioccupied West Beirut.

Several of Mr. Begin's political associates, including the leaders of three parties that form a part of his government coalition, are now demanding such an investigation, and Justice Minister Moshe Nis-sim said Sunday that it appears the cabinet will have on choice when it meets Tuesday but to agree to the

The Israeli military command announced Sunday that all Israeli forces will leave West Beint by Wednesday, and said that Israel will also turn over the airport south of the city to the Lebanese government. Foreign Ministry offi-cials, while continuing to insist that there had been no "ultima-tum" from the United States for the withdrawal, said Israeli forces would be completely out of the city, including Christian East Beirut, by the end of the week.

Mr. Begin was quoted Sunday as saying he had opposed the convening of a judicial board of inquiry, the meat resemble to the convenience of the con the most powerful kind of investi-gaove body in Israel, because such panel should be reserved for only the most serious wrongdo-The prime minister denies that Israel bears any responsibility for the massacre, but Israel Radio said Sunday that he was on the verge of proposing a judicial inquiry himself.

Uproar in Parliament

Mr. Sharon set off the uproar during a parliamentary debate last week when he asserted that when the opposition Labor Party was in power in 1976 the Israeli army played some unspecified role in an earlier massacre of Palestinian ref-ugees by Lebanese Christian mili-tia units at the Tel Zaatar refugee camp in Beirut

The accusation was denied by Labor Party leaders who headed ent at the time. A retired army general who was responsible for contacts with the Christian militias also denied it.

"Whether we like it or not, an accusing finger is being pointed at the army, and we're being accused of things of which the army is completely innocent," said General Ginamin Ben-Eliezer, who is now the secretary-general of a small political party that is part of Mr. Begin's government coalition.

Tens of thousands of Israelis from across the country poured into Tel Aviv Saturday to demand that the Begin government resign because of the massacre. Security officials said it was the largest rally in the country's history.

The organizers of the protest, the Israeli Labor Party and other opposition political organizations, said that the crowd numbered 350,000.

Mr. Sharoo acknowledged in a television interview last week that Israel's announced intention in sending its troops into West Beirut earlier this month - to prevent anarcby after the assassination of the Lebanese president-elect, Bashir Gemayel — was merely a "smokes-creen" to hide its real purpose of rooting out the remaining Palestinian guerrillas in the city. Dissension in Unit

Disgust Rising Over Massacre And Impulse to Cover It Up

By David K. Shipler New York Times Service

JERUSALEM — After the events of last week, Israel may never again be able to feel the same way about itself. Something snapped. The conviction that Israel was somehow different, somehow special amid the brutality and hypocrisy of the world's na-only at the pinnacle of governmental power did a tight circle of least moral certainty seem to remain. Prime Minister Menachem Begin, to wrapped in the mantle of virtue he has always worn, dismissed as h 'a blood libel" the assessment that Israel bore some responsibility mp

But these sentiments seemed aberrations. The incident itself, and the government's impulse to cover up an Israeli involvement bed that gradually came to light, disgusted Israelis at almost every we corner of the society, mobilizing a powerful surge of outrage that ote extended into the upper levels of the army and into the cabinet oper room, and even into the ranks of Mr. Begin's most faithful admiration.

Herut Party Unrest

By week's end, after a relentless Israeli press had ferreted out tica piece after piece of evidence that Israel had sent Phalangists into the refugee camps and that army headquarters had known of the massacre soon after it began, some stalwart members of Mr. Begin's Herut Party were telling each other — but apparently oot the prime minister — that a full-blown judicial inquiry must be convened and that Defense Minister Ariel Sharon must go. And Mr. Begin's refusal to dismiss him, arguing personal loyalty and permoved, left the prime minister more isolated than he has been for

It was Mr. Begin himself who recalled Deir Yassin. He brought it up at a cabinet meeting and in several private conversations.

The name is scarcely known outside the Middle East, except to ht those who follow the region closely. But it is a code word of terror and anger and revenge among the Arabs, and a stain that bas marked Mr. Begin throughout most of his life. On April 9, 1948, Deir Yassin was an Arab village at the west ern edge of Jerusalem. In the continual Arab attacks on Jewish convoys between Jerusalem and the coast, the village was considcred an enemy military stronghold by Mr. Begin's underground, the Irgun Zvai Leumi. His men attacked at dawn that day, suffering 4 dead and nearly 40 wounded, according to his account, and leaving dozens of dead Arabs - men, women and children, said by survivors to have been lined up against stone walls in the village and shot. Mr. Begin has always insisted publicly that the civilian population had been warned to get out and had been burt inadvertently in the heat of battle.

Dismissal Ruled Out

It all came back to him last week. He was oot in Deir Yassin himself, he pointed out, and knew nothing of it until after the fact. But he never broke ranks with his men by pointing a finger of blame, he told his colleagues. And be would not do that now. He would not dismiss his friend, Mr. Sharon. He would not implicate Israel by calling the full judicial inquiry urged by the opposition Labor Party — a device, he felt, to topple his government.

Many people who had believed in Mr. Begin were shocked, suddenly seeing a shallower morality than they had imagined in a man so moved and driven by the horror of the Holocaust, a man so contemptuous of those "good" Germans who insisted that they In addition, a shiver of alarm went through the country over

Mr. Sharon. Many Israelis were haunted not only by the television pictures of the bodies in the Chatila camp but also by those of their defense minister face as he attacked the Labor opposition in the Knesset, Israel's parliament. Semiofficial sources have told Western newsmen that the action will be taken at a meeting of the Polish parliament sometime in October. But Mr. Wiatr was the first ranking Polish official to comment explicitly on the subject during an interview.

The regime has repeatedly committed itself to the reappearance of self-governed trade unions indedent of party and government interference. It sees unions as essential to winning worker support for economic recovery.

However, the regime argues that Solidarity exceeded trade union bounds to become an organizacion of political opposition: It main-tains that Solidarity's top leaders, most of whom have been interned since the imposition of martial law, remain "unrealistic."

government newspaper Polish Republic charged last week, "Can one imagine that one fine day a trade union with such a fatally flawed name will simply reappear in the public life of the country as if nothing had happened?" it

Some analysts have suggested that the authorities are raising the specter of Solidarity's dissolution as a trial balloon or as part of a campaign to make an eventual, less drastic solution look like more of a concession than it really might turn out to be.

Poland's Roman Catholic Church leaders and influential groups of Polish intellectuals have repeatedly called for the reactivation of Soldarity as a precondition for a national accord that the gov ernment says it wants. The free trade unions united under Solidarity's banner had nearly 10 million members, more than one-fourth of the population, a year ago.

But the Soviet Union and some of its other allies are reportedly pressuring the Polish military leader, General Wojciech Jaruzelski, to end the current political deadlock by moving decisively against Soli-darity and all other elements of potential political opposition. Asked how he assessed the potential public reaction to dissolution of Solidarity, Mr. Wistr commented: "I wish I knew. "There is a possibility there will be some opposition to it," he said, "the crucial thing is not whether there will be street demonstrations. The crucial thing is how workers react in the factories. He said that nationwide demon-

Mr. Wiatr also indicated that some government officials still believe negotiations with Solidarity

U.S. Indicates British and Dutch May Join Beirut Force

By Michael Getler and John M. Goshko Washington Post Service

WASHINGTON - Britain and se Netherlands have expressed an nterest in contributing troops to ne multinational contingent of J.S., French and Italian forces reparing to take up positions in nd around West Beirut, according b U.S. government officials.

The first public indication of butch and British interest came 'riday from Defense Secretary aspar W. Weinberger, who said t a news conference in St. Paul, finnesota, that "two or three ther countries have expressed ome interest" in sending troops to

Although Mr. Weinberger delined to identify the countries, ther officials said that the Dutch nd British governments had indiated an interest in eventually joinig the operation.

Jeane J. Kirkpatrick, the U.S. hief delegate to the United Nations and one of the staunchest pro-Israeli figures in the administration, said on Friday that the United States must share part of the blame for the massacre of Palestinian civilians in Beirut last

Calling for a "dispassionate, competent commission of inquiry," she said that, in addition to those who actually did the killing moral responsibility rests with "all those who did not do everything they could to maintain order and

That, Mrs. Kirkpatrick contended, includes not only the governments of Israel and Lebanon, but also the United States, France and Italy, which withdrew their forces from Beirut before the massacre.

In regard to broadening the multinational force, U.S. officials said that, at the moment, the initial contingent of roughly 3,000 U.S., French and Italian troops probably would be sufficient.

Troop contributions from other countries, however, could become important if the mission or territory of the force were expanded, or if . long stay in Lebanon made replacements necessary, they said, In addition, troops from other countries could enhance the force's mission of calming fears among Beirut's population, of ensuring that Israeli troops do not return to the city, and of giving the fledgling Lebanese government time to assert its sovereignty over the city, they noted. In St. Paul, Mr. Weinberger indicated that the U.S. Marine units would stay on the outskirts of Beirut and "will oot be patrolling inside" the city.

He indicated that the American force, initially set at about 800 men, could grow to 1,200. The Pentagon, however, said that decision had not been made.

Administration officials said they had learned that Syria played a strong role in persuading the recent Arab League meeting in Fez,

Morocco, to set out its own peace

Execution of Afghan Troops Reported ISLAMABAD - A guerrilla commander tricked 72 Afghan govern-

A report by the Afghan Islamic Press said that Commander

Mohammed Zaman, operating in the Khogyani region about 100 miles (160 kilometers) east of Kabul, pretended to defect from the rebel ranks and, after gaining the confidence of government officers, was given a contingent of 72 troops for a mission to assassmate insurgent leaders.

Instead he led the troops to waiting Moslem fighters, the agency said.

A government officer, sensing the trap, shot and killed a guerolla before being killed himself, the agency reported. His troops surrendered, and 37 of them later were executed publicly for their Communist links, accord-

In a press statement, the Samar-based group of priests and some also accused the military of "witch-hunting" and of "planting evidence" against the three. They were arrested Sept. 1 when soldiers raided a church-run social action center in the town of Cathalogan, 330 miles (530 kilometers) southeast of Manila.

The nun, identified as Helena Gutierrez, was freed on bail two days after the raid. She was charged with inciting to sedition, the group said. It said the two male workers, accused of possessing subversive documents, were still in military custody. Government forces on Samur Island are fighting communist rebels, and military authorities in the area claim some church members actively support the guerrillas.

These officials also noted that Syria had not been pressing for a Soviet role in the Middle East negotiating process, despite the new Soviet arms shipments. Intelli-gence officials said Moscow had already sent Damascus modernized versions of surface-to-air missile batteries and additional highperformance planes.

According to the officials, King Hussein has expressed concern about Syria, saying that if he took an active role in the negotiations it might provoke Syria into moving its troops to the Jordanian border and threatening an invasion, as it did in 1980. At that time, it was believed that King Hussein might have been ready to join with Israel

The Cinchoneros take their name from a 19th century Honduran peasant movement, and are believed to be closely tied to rebels in neighboring El Salvador. The Cinchoneros had originally demanded concessions from the government that underscored their internationalist sympathies and the extent to which Honduras is becoming what some foreign observers described as a "sideshow" to Central America's bitter wars, Among the insurgents' demands

Prompt Decline in Voting in U.S.

Washington Post Service

WASHINGTON - Explaining why he did not vote in the 1978 congressional elections, a 27-yearold oil field machinery repairman in a small town in southwest Texas said, "I didn't feel any of the candidates were qualified." From what he says, he probably won't vote this year either.

A 44-year-old woman who works in a factory in northern New Jersey also is unlikely to vote in November. In 1978, "I wasn't interested in any of the candidates," she said. "They weren't helping poor people, they were helping the rich."

The White House has indicated Another probable nonvoter is a young doctor from suburban Detroit who did not vote in the 1978 congressional or 1980 presidential elections. Her first inclination was to blame herself, saying, "Apathy, I suppose."

But apathy is only part of the story. For the great majority of cit-izens interviewed in a nationwide Washington Post-ABC News poll, anger at Congress and frustration with the Democratic and Republican parties are important factors in the growing phenomenon of nonvoting in the United States.

The nationwide decline in voting has been particularly steep in recent years, especially when, like this year, there is no presidential election. In 1970, 43.5 percent of eligible voters turned out for congressional races across the country. cent disagreed and 8 percent of in 1974, the turnout fell to 36.2 fered no opinion.

According to the poll, nonvoters as well as voters hold Congress in deep contempt. This is reflected in from the poll, in the form of state-

Nonvoters, on the other hand, are more likely than voters to feel that there is hardly any difference at all between the two parties. Four in 10 nonvoters feel that way, as against 3 in 10 voters.
To some extent, many people continue to go to the polls because they feel that their vote is important, not because they like the choices offered them. And growing numbers appear to be concluding that their vote is not important af-

The poll suggests that only 14 percent of those under the age of 30 are likely to vote this year. Above that age, participation is seen picking up sharply, with 39 percent of people from 31 to 60 voting. And among those older than 60, 53 percent may be expected to vote.

Women are seen voting at the same rate as men or in a slightly higher proportion. The survey suggests that the turnout will be 34 percent among women and 32 percent among men, but the differ-

The question has been one of the perennials of Canadian foreign policy since the 1940s, when the United States blocked Canada's admission to the Pan American Union, the organization's precursor, on the ground that me of the Commonwealth should be

That objection evaporated soon after World War II, and since then Canada has hesitated for reasons of its own, maintaining only ob-server status in the organization. Opposition to full membership stemmed from a widely held feeling that if Canada joined, it would face the increased risk of openly alienating either the United States, its main partner in trade and cul-ture, or the poor and developing countries of the Third World, whose causes it has championed in the talks between rich and poor nations.

Falklands Lesson

In the course of the committee hearings, the impact of this polarization was made clear by the fighting in the Falkland Islands. Though Canada's support for Britain in that conflict was as great as that of the United States, and the popular sentiment here was even more pro-British, the country did not have to take a position in the OAS debates. Offsetting such concerns has been Canada's rapidly deepening involvement with Latin America, especially in the last two years. In that time the Canadian government and public have been engaged by the fighting and elections in El Salvador, by the diplomatic wrangling over American suggeswrangling over American sugges-tions for development of the Car-ibbean, by the Falklands and by the shattering of the Mexican economy. Cuban Bid in UN to Call Puerto Rico U.S. Colony Fails

New York Times Service
UNITED NATIONS, New York
The United States has won a decisive victory on the floor of the General Assembly in defeating a Cuban attempt to declare Puerto Rico a colony of the United States. The United States won wide backing against the Cuban effort on Friday. The 70-30 vote with 43 abstentions reflected large support from Latin America and Western Europe, and abstentions came from key nations such as India, Mexico, Kenya and Yugoslavia. Jeane J. British Liberals, Avoiding Disputes, Try to Invigorate Centrist Alliance

By Susan Billington New York Times Service

BOURNEMOUTH, England The Liberal Party gathered last week in this relaxed coastal town, where its greatest leader, William Gladstone, spent his dying days, for a conference designed to breathe new life into its alliance with the Social Democratic Party. The party leadership kept contentious issues off the agenda and boosted alliance unity in a series of speeches and announcements that culminated on Friday in a keynote address by the party leader, David Steel, in which he said that the alliance was becoming "the real oppositioo to the Tories. In a speech on Saturday, Roy Jenkins, the Social Democratic leader, urged an end to quarrels between the two parties so that they could prepare for the next general election. "Our aim is to win seats, not just fight for them."

But the leaders could not fully quell discontent among some Lib-eral members who believe that the alliance, which was formed last year, is burting their party more than helping it. Michael Meadowcroft, a Liberal parliamentary candidate, bitterly attacked Mr. Steel for his "dismissive attitude" to his followers in an interview midway through the conference. And Tony Greaves, secre-tary of the Association of Liberal Councillors, said in an interview on Wednesday that "the alliance is getting in the way of what we're trying to do as a party."

Hopes Dampened

The Liberal Party, which last governed Britain in the 1920s, voted a year ago to join the alli-But mitial hopes have since been dampened by disputes beween the two parties over the sharing of parliamentary seats. This combined with a surge of public support for the government after the Falkland Islands crisis to damage the alliance's performance in opinion polls.

Although Liberals meeting in Bournemouth were less optimistic about the alliance, they were also more confident about their own party's strength. For the first time they are running ahead of the Social Democrats in opinion polls. The most recent Gallup survey gave the Liberals 12 percent sup-port and the Social Democrats only 8.5 percent.

The Liberal Party also outperformed the Social Democrats in the May local elections with the help of a strong grass-roots organi-zation that their newer partner lacks. The Liberals won 407 local council posts to the Social Democrats' 85 and now have more elected local councillors - city and county council members - than at any time in their history.

This oew strength makes many Liberals even more besitant to help the Social Democrats win elections. About 60 prospective Liberal parliamentary candidates have been asked to step down to allow Social Democratic candidates to

On the eve of the Liberal Party conference, the Social Democrats conceded about half a dozen of these bothy contested seats back to the Liberals in an effort to avert anti-alliance protest.

"Liberals this year are more so-ber and responsible and less fun and frivolous," said Richard Holme, a former Liberal president. For the first time they see themselves oot just as a party of protest, a safety valve for those who don't like the system, but as a party of government."

At the assembly's opening, the two parties announced that in January they would hold rallies and issue a joint election platform containing U.S.-style "priorities" that the two parties hold in commoo rather than the more specific policommitments oormally put forth in British party manifestos.

But the Liberals disagree with the Social Democrats over whether Britain should renew its independent nuclear deterrent and whether it should agree to the deployment of cruise missiles, which the Social Democrats favor but the Liberals

Suzuki, in China, Seeks To End Book Dispute

By Christopher S. Wren New York Times Service

BEIJING — Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki of Japan arrived Sunday on an official visit commemorating a decade of close Chinese-Japanese ties, which were strained recently by a revival of bitter wartime memories.

Commerce between the two former enemies is the key subject for discussion between Mr. Suzuki and Chinese leaders. Japan has become China's biggest Western between the two exceeding $10 billion last year. By comparison, Chinese-American trade in 1981 was $5.5 billion.

But Mr. Suzuki also promised last week to take swift steps to resolve the tension that developed last summer between Beijing and Tokyo over the rewriting of Japaoese school textbooks to play down Japan's military aggression and brutality in China before and during World War II.

Following strong Chinese pro-tests, Mr. Suzuki said that the textbooks would be revised again in 1985, a year earlier than the oext scheduled review. China accepted this as a step forward but still wants the original accounts restored to the textbooks.

Assurances to Zhao

In an initial, two-hour meeting Sunday with Prime Minister Zhao Ziyang, Mr. Suzuki reportedly promised that textbook errors would be corrected.

Mr. Suzuki was quoted by a spokesman as having told Mr. Zhao that Japan could become a great economic power but will def-initely oot become a great military power again.

Mr. Suzuki's visit was scheduled to coincide with the 10th anniversary of the normalization of diplomatic relations between China and

Chinese Expected to Try to Avoid Ousting British From Hong Kong

HONG KONG — For more than three decades, Hong Kong has been China's compromise with reality. The British colony is a vestige of 19th-century Western imperialism, evoking memories of opi-um wars and China's humiliation at the hands of foreigners. Since it came to power in 1949, the Beijing regime has always had the option of snatching control of Hong Kong, which is defenseless and dependent on China for half its food and most of its water.

Yet, despite its internal shifts of leadership and ideology over the years. China has chosen to leave Hong Kong alone, because it has served its interests to do so. Hong Kong is the economic gateway to China, a source of foreign exchange, investment and technology. Io addition, Hong Kong has been a social safety valve for China, absorbing refugees at the current rate of more than 65,000 a

Last week, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher of Britain met with Chinese leaders in Beijing to my to persuade them that for the economic benefits to continue, Hong Kong must remain under British control. After Prime Minister Zhao Ziyang reasserted China's claims, the two sides agreed to begin "intense negotiations" immediately with the "common aim" of maintaining stability and prosperi-ty, according to Mrs. Thatcher, who arrived Sunday in Hong

Britain's View

To save face, China can claim. titular sovereignty and even fly its flag over the capitalist city-state British diplomats say. But for the foreseeable future, they contend, Britain must run Hong Kong to prevent a buge flight of people and capital. This view is shared by most of the Hong Kong Chinese, who constitute 99 percent of the 5.2 million residents. The British symbolize the existing order, and their presence is necessary to maintain confidence. Without confidence, the colony's currently dy-namic economy would wilt.

"The people in Hong Kong are very worned," reported Joseph Cheng, a political scientist at the Chinese University of Hong Kong. "It is absolutely essential that a British administration be retained, probably for a decade or more."

At first glance, the reason for the deep concern over Hong Kong's future seems distant: Britain's 99-year lease from China on the so-called New Territories, representing 90 percent of the colony's land, expires in 1997. But many commercial mortgages and other business contracts run for 15 years, and after the July 1 anniversary of the lease, tensions rose noticeably. Business decisions in Hong Kong are being delayed because of the uncertainty over what China plans to do.

Last week, Chinese officials reiterated the rather vague position they have taken in recent months. China, they say, will reassert its sovereignty over Hong Kong, but-the prosperity and social system of the city-state will not be affected.

The worry is that China will try to negotiate for some type of joint administration of Hong Kong. "That would be disastrous," said Immny D. McGregor, director of the Hong Kong General Chamber of Commerce. "But I fear that is what Peking has in mind."

The Londoo-Peking negotiations, which may last a year or more, will be delicate. If China feels it has to choose between national dignity and economic bene-fit, then "it will undoubtedly choose national dignity," a British diplomat predicted.

The solution that seems palatable to China and likely to have the least negative effect on the economy would be granting soverlengthy but unspecified period, and scrapping the lease with its 1997 fuse. Unless it appears that negotiations are leading toward such a settlement in the next year or two, the Hong Kong economy will suffer, business and government officials predict. Such a solution should logically emerge from pragmanic considera-tions, given the strong economic interdependence between China and Hong Kong The colony's en-trepreneurs are the principal inves-tors in China's special economic zones - enclaves of free enterprise and foreign investment on which it is depending to help create em-ployment and development. Some leftist opponents of President Mohammed Zia ul-Haq's martial-law government in Pakistan have seized upon the issue, criticizing Gen. Zia for encouraging the influx of refugees. These critics fear that since Afghan rebels move freely across the border to conduct raids on Soviet posi-tions in Afghanistan, the Soviet Union's bostility toward Pakistan will increase as its losses mount.

Pakistan's official position toward the rebels is that it recognizes the various guerrilla political fronts headquartered here only for the purpose of registering refugees and settling disputes with local residents.

In the remote tribal areas close to the Afghan border there have been frequent reports of armed

Arrests of Backers Assailed by Widow Of Sanjay Gandhi

NEW DELHI — Police have arrested on murder charges three political supporters of Maneka Gandhi, the widowed daughter in law of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi who opposes the government, officials said Sunday.

Maneka Gandhi, the widow of may Gandhi, who was killed in a plane crash in 1980, denounced the arrests as "political retaliation" because of her opposition to the government.

On Saturday, police arrested Maneka Gandhi's three top supporters from Uttar Pradesh state a legislative assembly member. Akbar Ahmed; a member of Parliament, Kalpanath Sonkar; and a party organizer, J.N. Mishra.

The three were charged with murder, criminal conspiracy, theft causing evidence to disappear and concealment of a crime. They were jailed pending bail procedures.

The charges concern the shootng death of one of Maneka Gandhi's party workers Sept. 19 during her tour of Amethi constituency in Uttar Pradesh state. Maneka Gandhi has been using Sanjay Gan-dhi's popularity to boost a new party, Sanjay Vichar Manch, or "Sanjay's Platform," which op-poses the prime minister.

Pakistanis are generally reticent about the tension because of the collective pride the country has shown in providing a haven for a beleaguered Islamic neighbor. But privately Pakistanis expressed growing impatience and a fear that the tensions will increase as Afghans continue to arrive at a rate of 50,000 a month.

A university professor said that when the refugees began arriving he thought the limit of endurance of Pakistanis in the province would be short.

"I'm glad I was wrong," he said "but there still has to be a limit of endurance. We are seeing quite a few symptoms of patience running

Some Pakistanis complained that leaders of the six rebel political organizations that maintain headquarters here are beginning to involve themselves in local affairs and to comment on the manner in which Gen. Zia is transforming Pakistan into a fervently Islamic, fundamentalist state. On at least one occasion, senior officials of Gen. Zia's government are said to have warned rebel leaders to stay out of Pakistani politics.

Even with large infusions of for-eign money for refugee assistance-including $192 million from the UN High Commissioner for Refugees, Pakistan maintains that the influx has caused a severe strain on its budget and that increases in direct assistance by contributing nations will be needed as the refugee population grows larger.

Vehemently denying persistent reports of widespread corruption in its refugee program, the government says its direct cost this year will be $240 million, a significant amount for a country with a foreign exchange shortfall of $1 bil-

Colonel A.M. Barbar, minister of state for the frontier region, said that in addition to more assistance for inland transportation, Pakistan needs help in reforestation, construction of roads to refugee camps and the purchase of medical

But he added that he regularly contributes part of his earnings to the guerrilla organization.

U.S. Sends a Mission To Angola, Renewing Bid for Cuban Pullout

WASHINGTON — The United States has sent a high State Department official to Angola in a research effort to bring about the withdrawal of Cuban forces from Angola — the test search in the state of the Angola — the key remaining prob-lem holding up an agreement on the independence of South-West Africa, State Department officials

The mission to Angola followed an earlier set of unpublicized discussions on southern African issues by high-ranking U.S. and Soviet officials in Geneva last Monday, the officials said Saturday.

The talks in Geneva and the instant to faculty and the

The talks in Geneva last Monday involved Chester A. Crocker, assistant secretary of state for African affairs, and Leonid F. llychev. a Soviet deputy foreign minister, a West Germany.

Mr. Crocker reportedly received no commitments from Mr. Ilychev, but U.S. officials hope that the Soviet Union will privately be helpful. The talks will be continued Tuesday, when Secretary of State George P. Shultz confers with For-eign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko. If the Cuban troops withdraw from Angola, the United States will move promptly to establish formal diplomatic relations, offi-cials have said.

The Angolans reportedly want very much to normalize relations with the United States to become eligible for better economic ties and in the hope that the United States would be able to bring about an end to the civil strife in Angola, involving the forces of Jonas Savimbi, the head of the forces known by their initials as

JOHANNESBURG — South Africa's state-owned armaments corporation gave a champagne breakfast recently to begin a sales campaign for a new mobile artillery system it developed with the aid of data obtained illicitly from

Call for Right Priorities

In a speech Thursday night in Walvis Bay, a South African enclave on Namibia's Atlantic coast Prime Minister P.W. Botha said his government's economie aid to the territory gave South Africa the right to demand that the Namibian political parties "get their priori-ties right" and reach an agreement on the formation of a new interim government.

Mr. Botha strongly implied that the life of the existing National As-sembly, which is dominated by Mr. Mndge's Turnhalle Alliance, would not be extended when it expires at the end of November,

The Turnhalle Alliance respond-ed Friday morning by publishing the text of a memorandum pre-sented to Danie Hough, South Africa's administrator general for Namibia. The alliance, initially a creation of the South African Department of Foreign Affairs, said than by means of an election.

Mr. Mudge has charged that South Africa's apparent plan to ease him out was designed by the military intelligence branch of the South African Army.

The prime minister has said only that he wants to see a "more representative" national assembly in Namibia and a "more efficient" interim government.

The Israeli Conscience

To its credit, Israel is in turmoil. Whatever profit to its enemies, however great the pocrisy of many of its critics, it is a society it refuses to let its leaders avert their eyes in the blood of innocent Palestinians. ong with pained friends the world over, Iselis are struggling to bold their government standards that no one, in seven years, de-inded of Christian and Moslem murderers Lebanon. Even as Prime Minister Begin d Defense Minister Sharon burl back the ly charge of treason, waves of Israelis, duding soldiers, are spurred by horror and ame to assert their bumanity.

That fact is the essential starting place for who look back upon Sabra and Chatila for truction in the meaning of responsibility.

Begin's defiant refusal to take any blame, even to submit to independent inquiry, has reely compounded the damage to Israel's nutation — and security. Mr. Sharon's inequate accountings have only stimulated cams of conflicting testimony about every tail of his Lebanese operation. But the ist anguished responses are also coming of Israel, and they have been tellingly nmarized by our colleague, David Shipler IT, Sept. 25-26]: "No one suggests that Isfi troops participated in the massacre. But a country that rose out of Hitler's death nps, the answers 'We did not do it' and e did not know are not enough."

Nor will it be enough for Israel's leaders adgingly to confess "errors of judgment."

e misjudgments that made Israel even an witting accessory to Phalangist barbarity of a piece with the misguided policy of hing terror with terror, ft all has its roots in what Mr. Shipler calls a "siege mentality"
— a state of mind that makes every national ambition a matter of national survival and confuses serious disagreement with betrayal.

A largely hostile world bears its share of esponsibility for sustaining that mentality. Even now, statesmen and a pope honor the killers of Israeli children while condemning Israel for collaborating with the killers of Palestinian children. And on Friday, communist and Arab nations voted, obscenely, to expel Israel from a UN agency for "geno-cide." On Tuesday, Jordan's King Hussein, the sponsor of the Palestinians. "Black September" in 1970, said he could never negotiate with Israel's "master terrorist."

Thus it is that Mr. Sharon equates criticism with treachery and Mr. Begin accuses his opposition of exploiting a tragedy for political gain. Yet the inescapable truth is that Israel's leaders stumbled into tragedy and tried to hide from it. And their reasons are political, not military: to shape the polities of Lebanon and to cling to power until they have made Israeli domination of the West Bank's Palestinians irreversible.

As the most formidable military power in the Middle East, unstintingly supported by America, Israel in its struggle for security has reached the point at which politics and diplomacy can replace combat. But events have also shown how policies that deny the humanity of Palestinians, and seek to dominate them, directly threaten Israel's inner strength and U.S. support. The cries of conscience from Israelis and their foreign friends pertain to Israel's safety as well as its soul.

— Anthony Lewis in The New York Times.

Mr. Begin's bloodstained adventure in Lebanon has gone abominably wrong. The wrong is not just the outrage to humanity - the deaths of 17,000 people, the crippling of 30,000 others, the brutal dispersal of the Palestinians in the shabby camps of the south, the indiscriminate and merciless pounding of Beirut, and now the obscene massacres which, at the very least, the Israeli Army allowed to happen. The wrong is also in Israel's bankrupt policies.

Vulnerable little Israel has long been a fiction. The real problem is the vulnerability of the Arabs. It was precisely Israel's over-whelming power vis-à-vis its weak and divided neighbors that tempted Mr. Begin and Mr. Sharon into the grandiose geopolitical designs which have now brought obloquy upon them. The idea of reshaping the Middle East appears to have been so intoxicating to Mr. Begin and his colleagues as to blind them to the difficulties and to justify any methods.

— The Observer (London).

There are signs that Israel's passivity — to put it mildly — during the Beirut massacre is beginning to generate hostility to Jews in general, and not just to Israel. Mr. Begin has always been only too quick to denounce opposition to his policies as "anti-Semitism," usually without justification. It is perhaps time for those around him to question whether those same policies are not generating the very emotion that the prime minister has sought to banish with his denunciations. - Neue Zürcher Zeitung (Zurich).

A Dilemma for the Israeli People ...

TEL AVIV — With the success of the Begin government's des-perate efforts to hold onto power, while resisting an objective inquiry into the circumstances of the Beitur massacre, a dilemma faces every caring Israeli citizen. How can he or she continue to live and pay taxes and serve in the army when the gov-ernment tacitly admits at least to complicity in mass murder?

As Amnon Goldenberg, president of the Israeli Bar and a onetime candidate for the justice portfolio in the Begin cabinet, has ob-served, an innocent party has noth-ing to fear or hide, and would welcome an inquiry in order to clear itself of suspicion.

The Begin government stands condemned in the eyes of the world, and repulsive to half — the more educated half — of the Israeli population. Even public figures who have supported Israeli settlements in Arab territories have called for the resignation of Prime and Defence Min. Menachem Begin and Defense Minister Ariel Sharon. Thus, Energy

By Boas Evron

Minister Yitzhak Berman could not reconcile membership in the Begin government with his conscience, and resigned, as did Menachem Milson head of civil administration n the occupied territories.

The government has succeeded in scraping together a slim parliamentary majority, but morally it is at a dead end. Morally, but also politically, because this horrible event symbolizes the colleges of its whole symbolizes the collapse of its whole Lebanese adventure.

All its objectives have backfired. Instead of bringing about a Leba-nese regime favorable to Israel, it now faces a Lebanese president bent on putting the greatest possi-ble distance between himself and the Israelis. Instead of destroying the Palestinian national movement, it has provided it with a tremendous boost, purged it of the moral stigma that clung to its methods, and provoked a reluctant United States to launch the Reagan plan. The pope would not have granted Yasser Arafat an audience, nor would the Italian government have granted him such a warm welcome. were it not for the Israeli invasion of Lebanon. Those facts have not yet penetrated the minds of Mr. Begin's supporters, although they must now be feeling the pinch of inflation accelerated by the costs of war. Polarization, sometimes to the point of violent friction, has deepened in Israeli society.

The corrosive moral effect on Israel could be likened to what would have happened in America had Richard M. Nixon, condemned in the eyes of thinking Americans as guilty of criminal offenses, succeeded in evading investigation and impeachment, and continued to serve as president.

If the discredited Begin govern-ment continues in office, an ominous portent of what could happen is the increased brutality of the police in suppressing protest dem-onstrations, such as the shooting of Israeli Arab demonstrators in Nazareth and the unprovoked use of tear gas against peaceful anti-government demonstrators in Jeru-salem — including six members of the Knesset, distinguished writers, academics, journalists, and many children and babies.

An even graver development is the refusal, on questionable grounds, of Mr. Sharon and Chief of Staff Rafael Eitan to appear be-fore the Knesset committee for for-eign and security affairs. Obviously they could not face its probe, there-by dealing a blow to the very concept of executive accountability to the legislative branch.

Thus a massacre of Palestinians in Beirut and the hes designed to hide government complicity could lead to the undermining of demo-cracy and civil liberties in Jerusalem and Tel Aviv by a government bent more on its own survival than oo morality and the national interest.

NEW YORK — Yasser Arafat, whose followers had murdered Israeli babies at Maalot and who was the leader directly responsible for the deaths of the Lebanese babies behind whom he hid his forces in Beirut, has been photo-graphed everywhere kissing Palestinian babies who escaped the Beirut massacre. Mr. Arafat, whose people had been murdering Christians throughout Lebanon, was received by the pope, while the chorus denouncing Israel became ever more strident and cacophonous.

Relatives of some of those murdered Christians went into two camps in Beirut and, with other Christian militiamen, did unto several hundred Palestinian women and children what had been done by the PLO unto their women and children in Damour in 1976 in retaliation for a previous assault by Christians against Moslems. In a morally sane climate, responsibility would have been assigned to the thugs who initiated this particular cycle of murderous horrors and their opposite numbers who responded in barbarous kind. The rest would have been parceled out among the still unidentified assassins of Bashir Gemayel who triggered the entire episode; the PLO leadership that conspired (again!) to hide guerrillas and arms in camps housing civilians after it had agreed to leave Beirut; and the Israelis who allowed the Christians to enter those camps when they had reason to expect that a massacre would ensue, and who then failed

By Norman Podhoretz

io act quickly enough to stop it.

I put firael last on the list because Israeli complicity in this atrocity surely cannot be ranked with that of the Christian militias and the PLO. Yet there has scarcely been a word from anyone anywhere suggesting any such moral gradings and distinctions. On the contrary, almost nothing has been said about the PLO, and very little about the Christians. But the chorus denouncing Israel has become louder and lustier than ever, no doubt inspired to full-throated heights by the secret recognition that here at last the Israelis could be condemned.

No doubt, too, those who had borne false moral witness against the Israelis in previous weeks were also heartened by the chance to claim vindieation just at the moment when the political case they had simultaneously been making against the war was looking shabbier and weaker than ever.

The critics had declared that the Israeli action was hurting the people of Lebanon; yet the people of Lebanon were overjoyed at being liberated from PLO domination and tyranny. The critics had declared that Israel was damaging the inter-ests of the United States in the Middle East and creating opportunities for Soviet gains; yet never had American influence been so great in the Arab world, or Soviet influence so weak:

The massacre in Beirut did nothing to change those realities or to salvage the discredized political arguments of the critics of Israel. Which did not, of course, prevent the critics from claiming that the transcreen had for the critics from claiming not, of course, prevent the critics from claiming that the massacre had finally proved them right. Nor long ago I charged in an article in Commentary magazine entitled "PAccuse" that a good deal of anti-Semitism, embodied in the application of a double standard to the behavior of Jews, had surfaced in the attacks on israel's conduct in Lebanon. The same double standard is at work in this latest episode. minister of defense, should be held to account for his negligence. I join in that demand, and I also believe that an Israeli commission of inquiry would serve the best interests both of truth and of justice. But something more was implicit in the fact that, when Christians murdered Moslems for, ately began denouncing the Jews. The old double standard made another ugly appearance. And with this new failure to distinish among relative weights of responsibility, public discourse has taken another great slide down the slippery slope to moral idiocy.

Eritrean Resistance Holds, With No End in Sight

L ONDON — The armed struggle in Eritrea has entered its 20th year to qualify as possibly the longest active military guerrilla campaign in modern times. And there is still no sign of a break in the Eritreans' resistance, despite the numerically much stronger Ethiopian Army, which has the active support of the Warsaw Pact powers. Spokesmen for the Eritrean Popular Liberation Front claim there are 800 Soviet and other East European military and technical advisers helping Ethiopian forces in Eritrea.

While Cuban combat troops re-main actively deployed in Ogaden province and areas adjacent to Eri-trea, Fidel Castro still refuses to allow his soldiers to get drawn into fighting the Eritreans. Cuba belped to train EPLF cadres before the overthrow of Emperor Haile Selassie, and Mr. Castro says the Eritrean claim to independence requires a political rather than a military solution. The Warsaw Pact leadership has worked toward that end. In 1980, East Germany persuaded the Eri-treans to accept terms for a political settlement that envisaged a referen-dum among the 5 million Eritreans to decide whether they favored total independence an autonomous status or some federa link with Ethiopia. But the regime of Mengistu Haile Mariam turned down the offer, as it does any suggestion that could lead to Eritrea's separation from Ethiopia.

trea was a colony of Italy. The Unit-ed Nations agreed in 1960 to the territory being ceded to Ethiopia under an internationally agreed federal sys-tem. Two years later, when the em-peror tore up the federal agreement, the Moslem area of Eritrea went into revolt. Within a few years it was joined by the Christian Eritreans. The province has an almost equal number of Christians and Moslems.

Access to the Sea

The Marxist regime in Addis Aba-ba has proved to be no less antagonis-tic to the Eritrean cause than the late emperor, and for the same reason: Without Eritrea, Ethiopia would be a landlocked country. Eritrea is its only corridor to the Red Sea.

The Eritreans say that after independence they would guarantee Ethiopia's access to the sea. The offer has been repeatedly turned down. But if a political settlement has proved impossible, so has the military conquest of Eritrea. The emperor tried to break the resistance with a scorched earth policy. His successors have attempted time and again to crush the Eritreans with buge num-bers of troops, heavily armed with modern Soviet weapons and aircraft. On several occasions they assembled an army of more than 100,000 to smash the resistance "once and for all," hut succeeded only in clearing the guerrillas out of the main towns and away from the routes to the sea.

The guerrillas remain dug into the countryside. Repeated attempts to dislodge them from their stronghold at Nakfa have resulted only in major Ethiopian casualties. The EPLF still controls the whole area along the Sudanese border. In recent months the guerrillas have regained some of the Asmara the Eritrean capital.

support of their countrymen. This is in every sense a popular struggle.

The EPLF is undoubtedly the most sophisticated guerrilla movement spawned in Africa. Unlike others, it is technologically competent. Most of its activist cadres, men and women, are highly educated.

Not even the divisions among the different groups that go to make up the liberation movement have seriously impaired its capacity for resistance. The EPLF has emerged as the strongest fighting group.

Another feature of the Eritrean struggle is that the guerrillas have sustained their strength and morale despite scant foreign support. The Arabs initially saw their struggle as a Moslem independence movement against the Christian highlands. A few Arab states still provide money, but the amounts have dwindled in recent years. Most aid now comes from the United Arab Emirates.

In the past the Eritreans could count oo the good will of Sudan, but hot and cold. No other African country has come out in support of the Eritrean cause, because of the African leaders' implacable opposition to secession, However, there have been signs recently that President Samora Machel of Mozambique has some sympathy for the Eritrean cause. Meanwhile, the Ethiopians fighting a war at the other end of the country — giving military support to the Somali opposition to Mohammed Siad Barre's regime. Although fight-ing on the Somali side of the Ogaden border has now entered its fourth month, there is still no sign of it succeeding in disloding the precariously balanced Somali regime.

These conflicts within and around the borders of Ethiopia have taken a beavy toll of the Ethiopian Army. They have also contributed substan tially toward obstructing the Mengis-tu regime's efforts to conolidate its revolution, in which the Soviet bloc has invested heavily, both in military support and in prestige.

None of this is extraordinary when compared with the slaughter in Being or the brutality of certain African and Latin American regimes. Yet the Philippines has a particular relevance for Americans. The United States took over the Philippines around the turn of the century. As Western colo-nial experiences go, American control was enlightened. While nationalist movements in European imperial possessions were planning struggles for freedom, the Philippines was as-sured its independence as early as the 1930s, and it gained full sovereignty after World War II.

The new moves to save the franc coincided with public opinion polls showing a marked decline in the popularity of President François Mitterrand and Prime Minister Pierre Manroy.

The Socialist leaders were forced to abandon the expansionary economic policies that caused the first two devaluations presided over by their government, and instead to introduce several unpopular austerity measures, including cuts in government spending and a freeze on wages and prices.

French officials said the prospect of tighter exchange controls, as well as the $4-billion loan, were intended to convince the foreign exchange markets that Mr. Mitter-Come have been not rand is determined to avoid a third devaluation and to remain inside the European Monetary System. Europe Marks Time as N.Y. Bond Rally Fades

By Carl Gewirtz nal Herald Tribune

PARIS - A boom in the New York bond market early last week was the signal investment bankers were looking for to launch a batch of new Eurodollar bonds — five in all, totaling $530 million. But by week's end, the New York rally was sputtering and the Eurobond market was marking time.

New York was put off by the response to the Treasury's sale of seven-year notes and 20-year bonds, which was less enthusiastic than expected and a special disappointment after the buoyant response to the government's sale of four-year notes. That sale had started off last week's Treasury sales of $11.75 billion worth of pa-

While New York remained mired in worries about the money supply and whether the Federa Reserve is again tightening its grip and forcing interest rates up, Europeans clung to the logic that with the U.S. economy showing no signs of a forceful recovery the Fed Since the Socialists came to cannot afford to push rates higher. At the same time, Europe obviously feels under no pressure to

> U.S. corporate issues offered in Coca-Cola, for example, sold $100 million of seven-year notes bearing a coupon of 11% percent at a discount to yield 11.91 percent —at the time some % point below the yield on comparable U.S. government paper. But by the end of last week, with Coca-Cola trading at 97% the paper was yielding 12% at 97% the paper was yiesting 12% percent, compared with 12.37 percent for seven-year Treasury notes.

Likewise, Gulf Oil's 12%s of 1987, originally offered to yield 12.39 percent, about half a point to the compared to the percent and the compared to the below Treasury notes, ended the week at 98 for a yield of 12.82 percent - half a percentage point over comparable Treasury paper.

None of the new Eurobond issues launched last week had the clout to be priced under Treasury yields, a position reserved for triple-A-rated corporates that are household names in Europe. Nevertheless the terms on the issues for United Technologies and Dresser Industries were more favorable than the companies could have achieved in New York - a reflection of the continuing demand in Europe, and especially Switzerland, for quality U.S. pa-

United Technologies, whose U.S. debt is rated double-A, sold $100 million of seven-year paper at par bearing a coupon of 12% per-cent, a thin 10 basis points (100 equals a full percentage point) over Treasury paper and a rate the com-pany could not obtain in New york. The issue ended the week at Dresser, another double-A credit, sold $75 million of seven-year paper bearing a coupon of 121/2 percent at a discount of 991/4 to yield 12.67 percent, but the paper was traded at 971/2 for a yield of 13.07 percent.

Among the non-American names to tap the market, the best received was the Japan Development Bank, which sold $75 million of seven-year notes at par bearing a coupon of 12½ percent — a shade under comparable Treasury paper and a reflection of the market's esteem for paper guaranteed by the government of Japan. It ended the week quoted at 99% bid,

Two other triple-A rated issuers tapped the market, Ontario Hydro and Development Finance Corp. of New Zealand. But neither of these has the rarity value of Japan. In addition, the sale of Ontario Hydro was hurt by the large size of the issue, $200 million. The 10-year bonds bearing a coupon of 12% percent were priced at 99% to yield 12.84 percent, 30 basis points over Treasuries - a feat of its own since past issues were priced a full 100 points over Treasuries. Ontario ended the week trading at 981/2.
The DFC issue totals $80 million, of which only $50 million were initially offered and $30 million are to be out on the market at a later date. The seven-year paper bears a coupon of 11% percent and was sold at a discount of 974 to yield 12.36 percent. The notes were trading at 964 for a yield of 12.59

Although the yield gap between new Eurobond issues and the New York market narrowed from past weeks, the gap between the new issue market and the market for outstanding Eurobonds remained sub-stantial. Export Development Corp., another triple-A Canadian issue, could be bought in the secondary market at par bearing a coupon of 1314 percent.

To some extent the gap is illusory. If orders for millions of dollars of EDC paper hit the market, the price would certainly move up sharly and reduce the yield. Nevertheless, compared with the yields offered on new issues, there are bargains to be found in the secondary market.
The least successful issue of the ek was the $75 million, 10-year offering by Forsmarks, the nuclear power company guaranteed by the Kingdom of Sweden, bearing a coupon of 13% percent. Priced at 99 for a yield of 13.95 percent it ended the week quoted at 97% for a yield of 14.17 percent.

The Deutsche mark sector absorbed the issues on offer - with the exception of the shunned African Development Bank, which was priced unrealistically at par bearing a coupon of 10 percent.

Lukewarin Reception

Although the Bundesbank raised liquidity in the domestic market through a 10-percent cut in banks' minimum reserve requirements, the move failed to ignite much excitement. The market had also anticipated a further cut in the Lombard rate, which did not happen, and is demoralized by the po-litical vacuum of forming a new government and the ever-increasg size of the federal deficit.

Beecham sold 125 million DM of 10-year bonds at par bearing a coupon of 8% percent, the lowest yield for that maturity seen since 1980. It ended the week at 991/2.

Allied Swallows Bendix; Marietta Wriggles Free

By Robert J. Cole

New York Times Service

NEW YORK — A takeover battle that changed the shape of three major U.S. corporations has ended with an announcement by Allied Corp. that it has acquired Bendix
Corp. and freed Martin Marietta
Corp. to become an independent

The three-way accord announced late Friday provides for Allied to retain about 38 percent of Marietta's stock. This should aid Marietta, which is heavily burdened by debt as a result of its 31day takeover battle with Bendix and is reluctant to take on addi-tional debt to buy back this block of stock. At the same time, Allied agreed not in attempt to take over Marietta for 10 years. Marietta and Bendix are to swap the stock that each owns in the other and drop all litigation.

To convince Bendix to merge, Allied agreed to pay $85 a share— in stock and fixed-income securi-ties—for the Bendix shares still in public hands. But the Marietta-Bendix swap will value the Bendix shares held by Marietta at $75

Edward L. Hennessy Jr., chairman of Allied, said the accord will benefit all three companies. "Bendix has many fine companies," he said, "and particularly its aero-space electronics group, that will complement Allied electrical and electronics components and information systems core business."

He said he viewed Allied's "investment" in Marietta as "an opportunity to share in Marietta's bright future," noting that Allied would report its share of Marietta's profits as its own, a common technique known as equity accounting.

Allied's principal businesses are oil, gas and chemicals. Bendix is five-year notes bearing a coupon of 8½ percent were well received and traded at the par issue price. However, the European Invest-ment Bank's 200 million DM of primarily a manufacturer of automotive products but is also in-10-year bonds, bearing a coupon of 814 percent and priced at 99 to yield 8.4 percent, ended the week volved in such high-technology fields as aerospace electronics.

In a separate statement, Mr. Agee said he was "pleased and enthusiastic" about the agreement, which, he said, "will achieve many of our major objectives."

Mr. Agee — who started the costly takeover fight last month when he announced a surprise $1.5-billion bid for Marietta said the accord "will financially benefit our remaining sharehold-ers, over 40 percent of whom are our employees, preserve the basic integrity of our firm and give uparticipation in an outstanding company dedicated to many of the same principles guiding Bendix."

The head of Bendix, who will become president of Allied and second in command of the combined company, explained these principles as "a firm commitmen to research and development and high-technology businesses, an em phasis on financial strength and flexibility and a strong dedication to employee welfare."

Allied Praises Accord As Averting 'Disaster'

NEW YORK — By stepping into the takeover light between Bendix and Martin Marietta, Alhed succeeded in "saving these two ned succeeded in "saving these two companies from possible disaster," according to Allied's chairman, Edward L. Hennessy Jr.

"The spectacle of two large companies trying to swallow each other up is not very pretty," Mr. Hennessy told reporters Saturday. It's a situation potentially very damaging to the companies them selves, their employees, their stock-holders and their customers.

Calling Martin Marietta's earnings outlook "absolutely excel-lent," he said Allied will help revitalize Marietta, which was forced to borrow millions of dollars to keep its independence. Allied is to name two of its officials to Marietta's board, Marietta's debt will be 70 to 80 percent of total capital, more than three times the debt ratio for a healthy company such as Allied, Mr. Hennessy said. He also ac-knowledged that the skirmish that ended last Friday "might have a depressing impact" on Marietta's fight, "probably received some bad advice," but the Allied chief did not criticize Mr. Agee for trying to buy Martin Marietta.

I think his strategy of putting the two firms together was an ex-cellent strategy. Mr. Henness

The financial markets reacted mildly to Friday's Fed report, and interest rates climbed slightly. But most rates still ended the day low-

"The decline in the money supply is likely to be followed by more weakness over the next two weeks," said Lacy H. Hunt, executive vice president and chief economist of Fidelity Bank in Philadel-phia. He predicted that the trend

Not all bankers and economists shared Mr. Hunt's optimism, how-ever. Exporters Set Quotas On Coffee

LONDON - Coffee producing nations, with the support of con-suming countries, have agreed to limit the amount of coffee entering the world market in 1983 to about the level of the past year.

Against a background of excess supply and sluggish demand, the International Coffee Organization decided Saturday to fix the total export quota at 56 million 60-kilo-gram (132-pound) bags starting next month in an effort to bolster

Last year's quotas have been credited with having stabilized world prices. Coffee prices finished on a firm note Friday in London and New York, amid signs that the organization was near an agreement on the quotas.

The biggest share of the 56 mil-ion bags for 1982-83 will go to Brazil, the world's largest coffee producer. Brazil will be allowed 15.97 million bags.

Despite the latest accord, the surplus of coffee appears likely to grow. Brazil now expects that its crop next year will total around 30 million bags because of an unusually warm winter, pp from 17.75 million this year.

Colombia will have the next largest share, with a quota of 8.44 million bags.

milion pags.

The next largest exporters will be the African and Malagasy Coffee Organization, which includes the Ivory Coast, with 6.20 million bags; Indonesia, with 2.36 million; El Salvador, with 2.32 million, and Uganda, with 2.30 million.

They are followed by Mexico. 1.89 million; Guatemala, 1.80 million; Ethiopia, 1.36 million; Kenya, 1.29 million; Ecuador and Costa Rica, I.12 million each, and Zaire, 1.10 million.

U.S. Senate Backs Bill to Aid S&Ls

WASHINGTON - The Senate has approved legislation that would provide assistance to savings institutions and give them investment and lending powers similar to those of commercial banks.

The bill, approved Friday, would give federal regulatory authorities the power to issue government-backed promissory notes to bolster the net worth of S&Ls and mutual savings banks. The bill also would permit S&Ls to offer commercial and agricultural loans as well as the real-estate mortgages that have been their traditional in-

The bill now goes to a Senate-House conference committee.

Progress Made on GATT Agenda

Trade Officials Agree to Concentrate on 5 Topics the other issues certainly are not

By Axel Krause Trade officials interviewed last PARIS - After 10 months of diplomatic baggling trade officials have begun making progress in set-ting the agenda for a new worldweek predicted that intense debate would continue over how to handle specific issues within each of the five topics. The possibility re-mained that the GATT conference would fail to achieve anything wide trade conference scheduled for November in Geneva. have recently surfaced in GATT preparatory meetings and on Geneva's diplomatic circuit: cease-fire, roll-back and trade-peace plan. "We still are not sure what all these words mean, but the basic idea is to come up with a strong and political recommitment by GATT members to holding the line of protectionism," a senior Western ambassador said.

He and other trade officials said that any such initiative will have to be followed by concrete steps within GATT that would be aimed at reducing the impact of government subsidies, dumping, quotas and other domestic measures, both in the industrial and agricultural sec-

In Washington, William E. Brock, the U.S. trade representative, recently said that the Edministration views the conference as "an ideal opportunity" to resist protectionist trends and to strengthen GATT, particularly by liberalizing flows of services, investments and technology. .

But some elements in the U.S. approach have come under strong questioning by Washington's allies. Worries About Third World Debt Slow Lending in the Euromarket

By Carl Gewirtz

PARIS - Despite the insistence of commercial bankers that they ave nothing to fear from rescheduling the debts of major bor-rowers, the widening debt crisis of the developing countries has cast a pall over the syndicated loan mar-ter, which has been the major source of finance for those nations. "Rescheduling is not the end of the world," says one banker, "it just means we'll make more money on the loans outstanding" because banks oprmally charge a stiff inter-est-rate penalty for stretching out

But when pushed to explain the low volume of credits being ar-ranged, he explains that his re-laxed view of the situation is based on a long-term analysis assuming that rescheduling negotiations will succeed. "In the short term," he admits, "we're all scared as hell." The lear is that one or more borrowers may op! for the fully of repudiating their debt - which could cripple banks and starve the defaulters of future credits - or that one or more smaller banks may insist on repayment and set off a legal scramble.

At official levels starting with the World Bank, the main concern is that banks will indiscriminately shut off new credits to Latin America — as a result of Mexico's 90-day moratorium on loan payments and Argentina's stated de-sire to renegotiate the terms on its debt - just as they quit lending to Eastern Europe after the repayment difficulties of Poland and Romania.

Bankers say the Euromarket slowdown is a natural reaction to the changed situation. It gives them time to reassess the market and borrowers time to adjust to new, tougher lending conditions.

The general view is that maturities will be shortened and borrowing costs increased - with most of this tucked away in commissions rather than the size of the margin over the London interbank rate

The reason for this is the bitter memory that the Euromarket's overabundant liquidity in the late 1970s enabled borrowers to reopen accoriations and reduce margins set on loans taken out from 1974 to 1976. To protect against a re-turn of such competition to lend, bankers say they prefer the cash in hand of higher front-end commissions than higher margins that could vanish.

That does not mean margins will not rise — they definitely will. But the interest rate charge will not be the full measure of the rise.

Many bankers believe that Bra-Many bankers believe the zil's costs, the highest of any regular borrower; will become the This means from end fees of 14 percent. Depending no the strength of the borrower, these had until recently started as low as 1/2

While margins may not rise as high as Brazzl's standard 2½ points over the London interbank offered rate, the spread is deemed unlikely to be set lower than 1 percent, bankers say.

Brazil, with the second largest debt in Latin America after Mexi-co, risks being the most seriously affected by bankers' disaffection with Latin borrowers, as its cash needs are huge. Last week's launching of a $100million loan for Petrobras was taken as a sign that the major banks will not abandon Brazii. The 10 banks in the "club" deal were Ci-ticorp. Bank of America, Chase Manhattan, Manufacturers Hanover, Morgan Guaranty, Irving Trust, Chemical Bank, First Chica-go, Industrial Bank of Japan and Bank of Tokyo. Interest on the over Libor or 1% points over the prime rate.

But for Brazil to succeed in raising the $4.5 billion it still needs this year will require the host of small banks that traditionally participate in the market to return in force. Brazil's insistence on eight-year loans when the market prefers five to seven years also compli-cates the task of attracting lenders. Bankers say that Venezuela, which is sounding out the market for terms on a loan of up to $800 million, will need to pay 1% point over Libor for five years. Earlier this year, Venezuela rejected an of-fer of a $1-billion, seven-year loan when bankers insisted on a margin of 1% point. Two of the country's electricity companies are seeking $500 million for eight years, offering 1 point over Libor. That loan

France's agreement last week to pay 1/2 point over Libor on its $4billion loan signaled the end of margins below 1/2 point. Even the new level caused considerable grumbling by bankers. Neverthe-less, the French operation was a tremendous success, with 51 banks underwriting $5.7 billion. The oversubscription enabled the managers to reduce their original commitment by 30 percent.

Two Spanish borrowers are set to tap the market at terms now regarded as out of date. Cataluña is seeking $80 million for eight years, offering half a point over Libor for the first four years and 9/16 point for the final four. Barcelona has received an offer for a $100-mil-lion, 10-year loao at half a point over Libor but has oot formally ac-

Bankers say that the minimum loan charge for European bor-rowers is now % point over Libor. Asia remains the exception to the rule because bankers perceive that market as the one growth area in the years ahead. Thus, bankers' desires to get permission to open branches in Taiwan allowed Taipower to win fevorable terms for its loan.

The utility will be seeking $225 million for 10 years, paying % point over Libor.

DANCING GIRLS AND OTHER STORIES

By Margaret Atwood. 240 pp. $14.50. Simon & Schuster, 1230 Avenue of the Americas, New York 10020.

Reviewed by Anarole Broyard

MOST of Margaret Atwood's sto-ries in "Dancing Girls" are about what would ordinarily be called love, but perhaps someone reading her book will want to reconsider the word love. Is that what men and women do these days? Are they still at it? Or are they doing something clse. something more ambiguous and narcissistic and anxious?

In fact, anxiety may be the operative emotion in these affairs. Atwood's men and women seem to look for certain kinds of anxieties in other people to serve either as a counterpoint or as an answer to their own. Anxiety is more pressing for these people than love or desire. A happy marriage or affair is one in which the anxieties of the partners are nicely balanced, for it is the anxieties even more than the people themselves that go to bed together.

In one story, a man named Morri-son has mixed feelings about a wornan named Louise, who is attractive, intelligent and highly organized.
When she breaks under the strain of holding everything together, Morrison is pierced by desire. So this was his dream girl then," Atwood writes, "his ideal woman found at last: a disintegration, mind returning to its component shards of matter, a defeated formless creature on which he could inflict himself like shovel on earth, ax on forest, use without being used, know without being known."

But there's a more tender side, 100, to Morrison's love for the disintegrated Louise. Her helplessness is so much more intimate than her former efficiency. He feels that he's seeing all the way into her, past personality into essence, into the raw material of the self. It's as if our age, with so much history behind it, has grown bored with surface graces and is more coinfortable with the "honesty" of pathology. When Louise says about the place where they are that "the city has no right to be here," she's expressing a sense of dislocation so fundamental that even Morrison's hard heart irresistibly goes out to her. What could be more romantic than to live in and try to love in a city that has no right to be

When a woman in another story quarrels with her lover the effect is so disorienting that she feels "the outlines are slipping again, it's an effort to press the sidewalk down, it billows under her feet like a mattress." Fo quarrel is to turn their anxieties loose on one another, like dogs fighting while their owners helplessly look on How far can one go in compromes ing Atwood asks, without losing sight of one's self altogether, without disappearing into the terms of the compromise? For one woman, unrequired love is better, because you can have the romance without the threat, and either way there's going to be pain.

Another couple who are losing their balance try to recover it by going to balance try to recover it by going to visit the house of the poet Dylan Thomas in Wales. Perhaps poetry can save them. Thomas's thadding consonants, like the best of the lieut, his house on the seashore looking out over immensity. But the house is falling apart, just as the poet fell apart at the end of his life. If this is the best that art can do, what hope is there for

In another story, a woman who is a travel writer for a magazine comes to resent the fact that in her articles ale is always obliged to be pleased by the Edens of the world. She yearns for disorder, for the superior reality of h, and when her plane creates she finds that even our disorders are bankler. paltry.

Politeness and Pity

Then there's a piece about a young woman poet who gives readings at colleges to make enough money to support her husband, who is a stringgling painter. But she hates giving reagoing painter, is it she nates giving fea-sons, she feels that people come to is-ten only out of politicises and pity, or to see her humiliate herself. Before each reading, she usually gets a head-ache or some other sometons. achie or some other symptom of aver-sion, but this time she has a nose bleed that won't stop: All right, she says to herself, understanding at last what poetry is truly about. All right, she decides, I'll go out there and shout my poems and spray blood all over book, yet there's hope in it. What it shows us is that, no matter how bad things get, or to what extremity we are driven, human personality can always be counted on to come up with yet another symptom, another desperate piece of poetry. There's no end to us, even in our unhappiness.

In this case North knows that his high cards are well placed even if there are not many of them. Lacking slam interest he would bid four hearts or five clubs or even pass. So four dia-monds is a cue-bid, and South is happy to jump to six clubs. With a different hand North might correct to six

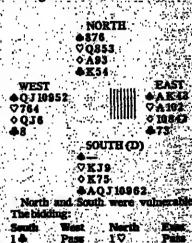

If the South hand contained a void diamond rather than a void spade, the four-diamond bid would discourage South and the partnership would rest

The next spade lead is ruffed, and the dummy is entered for two more trump leads. The defense takes two trump tricks and one spade trick. If the heart ace is held up, the defenders take one trump trick and two spade tricks.

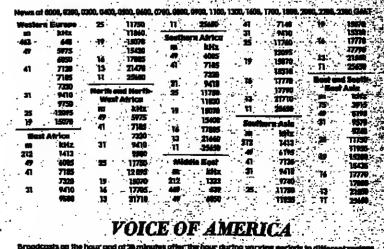

Six clubs was easy to make as the VERY few parmerships found a needed After roffing the spade lead, way to reach the excellent six- it was right to draw two rounds of club contract on the diagramed deal, trumps ending in the dummy to lead A possible expert sequence is shown the first round of hearts to the king. Northwestern Ends an Unhappy Era

By Gary Pomerantz

Washington Post Service
EVANSTON, Illinois — They had lost a record-34 straight games. They were 1,106 days removed from their last victory. But as the fog rolled off Lake Michigan on Saturday, all of that ended for the Wildcats.

With freshman quarterback Sandy Schwab passing like Otto Graham, the Northwestern great, and with tailback Ricky Edwards scoring touchdowns like Graham. Northwestern defeated Northern Illinois, 31-6, before 22,078 at Dyche Stadium.

Nosthwestern's fast victory was against Wyoming on Sept. 15, 1979; the score was 27-22. When the Wildcats lost, 61-14, to Michigan State last year, they broke the National Collegiate Athletic Association record of 28 straight losses that had been held by Kansas State and Virginia.

"Twenty months ago we set our goal: one victory," said Dennis Green, the second-year Northwestern coach. "Now that we've got it going, we can make it roll. When I woke up when I was a special day."

When Schwab threw a 13-yard touchdown pass to Edwards early in the first quarter, Northwestern led, 7-0. It was its first lead since the last game of the 1980 season. By halftime, Northwestern led, 21-0. Sta-tisticians were still researching at dusk to determine the last time that had happened. Someone said 1897.

The stadium scoreboard flashed. "We can... We will." Ultimately, they did.
Schwab completed 16 of 28 for 212 yards.
Edwards ran for 177 yards on 29 carries. One was an 80-yard TD run in the third quarter that made the score 28-6. Edwards, a senior. had four touchdowns on the day, tying Graham for the school record. They were the first touchdowns of Edwards's career.

Bnt Saturday'a significance extends be-youd end zones. It goes back years and years and many tears.

Benjamin H. Baldwin, a professor of jour-

Benjamin H. Baldwin, a professor of journalism, thumped his pen on the table in Fisk Hall on Friday morning. He is a veteran of 27 years of watching Northwestern football.
Talk about stamina.
Baldwin's words reached through the ages
when he said: "It is an unhappy and doleful feeling knowing the only way you're going to win is if everyone on the other team dies of cholera."

Nonsubscriber Baldwin's first year of teaching at Northwestern was 1956, Ara Parseghian's first of eight years coaching the Wildcats. Baldwin remembers some of these good years. He also remembers 1962, when Northwestern was ranked No. 1 in the polls for two weeks, and 1970 and 1971, when the Wildcars finished second in the Big Ten.

"That's why I don't subscribe to the theory that says we've always been bad. We've just let our establishment slip," Baldwin said. "This school is a bappier place in which to teach when the football team wins.

The average Northwestern fan is apathetie now, drifts in and out. I'm not sure I blame them."

Last week was fraternity rush week. As the Kappa Sigma pledges mopped the floor un-derneath a stolen road sign — a successful pledge-class swipe from years back — Rush Chairman Bill Waggener was sitting comfortably on the couch talking about an uncomfortable subject. Northwestern football.

"Yeah, it's a joke around here. But we laugh," said the senior journalism major, "only to hide the crying." Waggener had been a member of the crowd that tore down one of the goal posts last year after Northwestern lost to Michigan State for its record-setting 29th straight. Waggener recalls:

All of a sudden with four minutes left we started shouting, 'Goal posts!' After the game, the band tried to play, but we ran over them. And the Evanston police closed the gate so we couldn't take the goal post out of the stadium.

"So we carried it to the top of the stadium, threw it down into the parking lot and ran down to get it. We carried it down Central Street and stuck it in the president's yard.

"President [Robert] Strotz came out with a red face and said "We'll get them next year."
"We started chanting, "We're the Worst."
"Then we took the goal post down to Lake Michigan and threw it in. They had to send out a scuba diving team the next day, because we still had one game left. They never found the goalpost and they had to use this old wooden one for the last game."

Waggener paused and smiled. As mops swished behind him, be said, "It was the best collegiate experience I've ever had." There was, of course, another viewpoint to

"We were heading back to the dorms and we saw them running down the street with the goal post," says senior safety Bill Kornegay. "It was degrading humiliating I was worried about going back home and hearing the jokes."

Ah, the jokes. If the Wildcats could score one point per Northwestern foothall joke, Michigan and Ohio State would be in trouhle. So would the jokes. The most heralded one, of course, is borne by an area road sign proclaiming "I 94" — under which some prankster painted "Northwestern 0."

Alboreto Wins; Rosberg Racing Titlist

LAS VEGAS - Michele Alboreto of Italy scored the first Formula One victory of his career and Keke Rosberg of Finland clinched the world driving championship Saturday at the Las Vegas Grand Prix.
Alboreto, 27, who started the day io the third position behind pole-sitter Alain Prost and Prost's

Renault teammate Rene Arnoux, took the lead on the 51st lap in his Tyrrell after Arnoux's engine overheated and Prost's turbo-charged racer apparently had ng problems.

Alboreto's winning time for the 75-lap race was 1 hour, 41 minutes, 56,888 seconds or an average 100.1 miles per hour (about 160 kph).

It was the first victory for Tyrrell since the late Patrick Depailler won at Monaco in 1978.

NFL Talks Scheduled; Union Chief Pessimistic

Compiled by Our Staff From Dispatches NEW YORK — During the weekend, the principals in the National Football League players' strike prepared for their first face-to-face meeting in more than a week, but the union leadership was pessimistic that progress toward a settlement will be made soon. As fans across the nation faced the first fall Sunday in 63 years without professional fontball, Ed Garvey suggested that Sept. 26, 1982, might be only the first of many such Sundays. "I am not optimistic at all," said the executive director of the National Football League players' un-ion. "I have told the player repre-sentatives there has been no sign of a new offer from the owners." The new talks, first since the strike was called last week, were to take place Sunday between Garvey and Jack Donlan, his counterpart for the league's management council. Sources said they would be held "somewhere in the New York

They were to be the first since Sept. 17, when the players presented a new proposal for $1.6 billion over four years, the principal source of which would be half the league's television revenues. The league quickly rejected it and the strike began three days later. The only positive signs in Sunday's talks seemed to be that they were taking place at all and that they were being held in secrecy sometimes the precursor of a quick

Garvey was in a belligerent mood at a Washington news conference Saturday, assailing both the owners and the three major television networks, which are paying the league their regular fee estimated at between $32 and $35 million — for the first two weeks of the strike.

among themselves and with the NFL clubs to provide financial support for games never played and broadcast, they make a settlement less likely," Garvey said.

Garvey said he has written to the chairmen of ABC, NBC and CBS television contending that the networks have violated federal an-titrust laws. "We cannot imagine any legitimate business reason why the networks are bankrolling the clubs during a strike and illegal lockout; we must assume that the network payments result from a coercive contract demand by the NFL for financial assistance to help its clubs weather strikes and to coerce the players into accepting management's unlawful bar-gaining proposals," the letter said. While Garvey and Donlan were to meet, silence loomed for a dozen atadiums from Massachusetts to California. Countless millions of other Americans who normally spend for six bours or so in front of their television sets were looking for other entertainment. But they didn't have to look far. CBS scheduled last year's San Francisco-Cincinnati Super Bowl.

NBC was to carry two Canadian Football League games. ABC was offering the crucial American League East baseball game between Milwaukee and Baltimore. If the strike continues, there is also the prospect of televized col-lege fontball on Sundays. The NCAA cleared the way for that Friday by allowing colleges to ne-gotiate individually for Sunday games with the three networks authorized to carry college fontball — CBS, ABC and the Turner Broadcasting System. The networks have said they'll be ready to carry games next Sun-day, although Tom Hansen, NCAA director of college football television, said Saturday that a snag had developed. He declined to specify, but said it involved getting procedural agreements among the three networks.

WASHINGTON - Whenever anybody in politics or corporate life goofs, commits a gaffe, or makes a boo-boo (all are current vogue terms for blunder, having replaced foot-in-mouth disease), the people who race to minimize the reaction or fix the glitch are said to be engaged in damage control, or if they want to make it even more dramatic, in a damage-control operation.

I used to think damage control was launched by space-program spokesmen, who have produced a fistful of terms for general usage. For example, liftoff is now any auspicious beginning coming from a launch pad, which made all springboards obsolete. (Whatever happened to blastoff? Maybe it sounded too warlike, and the peaceniks at NASA chose to push a gentler term. I got more of a lift out of blastoff.) Similarly, thrust has moved from space lingo and passionate poetry to mean 'main goal or purpose," and re-entry has replaced comeback. (Relax; comeback isn't through yet.)

"Damage control is not a NASA term," reports David Alter, a space-program spokesman. "It is a Navy term." Over at the Navy, Lt. Robert Schmermund agrees: been around since at least the early 1930s." He whipped out a copy of the Dictionary of Military and Associated Terms, put out by the De-partment of Defense, which de-tines the term as "measures necessary aboard ship to preserve and reestablish watertight integrity, stability, maneuverability and offensive power; to control list and trim." Any old salt knows that list means to tilt left or right on a foreaft axis and trim means to dip your nose or drag your tail.

AS ONE often denounced as an unreconstructed cold warrior, I enjoy reconstructing the origin of the most powerful diplomatic coinage of the past generation.

Herbert Bayard Swope coined

the expression cold war in 1946, or so readers of my political diction-ary were led to believe. Swope was a Pulitzer prize-winning reporter, editor and publicist who late in life enjoyed drafting speeches for his friend Bernard Baruch.

The first time I ever heard the aut 4 expression 'cold war,' " Baruch equ wrote to Swope in 1949, undoubtean edly at Swope's request, "was when you first said it some time about June 1946. We decided not to use it at that time. I first used the phrase in April 1947."

One of the commentators at the time was Walter Lippmann, and Swope worned that the pundit who popularized his phrase would be credited with the comage. After Lippmann mentioned to Swope that he recalled a French phrase, la guerre froide, spoken in the 1930s, Swope wrote him sharply: "The first time the idea of the cold war came to me was probably in '39 or 40, when America was talking about a 'shooting war.' To me, 'shooting war' was like saying a death murder - rather tautologous, verbose and redundant. I thought the proper opposite of the so-called hot war was cold war, and I used that adjective in some letters I wrote, before our war."

Now comes Joseph Siracusa, a reader in American history at the University of Queensland in St. Lucia, Australia "Greetings from the Antipodes," he writes, in the first greetings this department has ever received from that place. "I believe I have discovered the earliest known use of the phrase 'cold

His citation is from the German newspaper Neue Zeit in 1893. So-cial Democrat Eduard Bernstein, complaining about the arms race in Europe, wrote: "This continued arming, compelling the others to keep up with Germany, is itself a kind of warfare. I do not know whether this expression has been used previously, but one could say it is a cold war (ein kalter Kreig). There is no shooting, but there is bleeding.

"I should like to share this information with your readers," writes Dr. Siracusa, "and ask them if they can go one better." To date, we have Swope's first use in English in 1946, and Bernstein's first use in German in 1893. If any unreconstructed cold warrior can find an earlier use in any language, the discovery will stir phrase buffs from Times Square to Queensland. Finally, the source of the adjective unreconstructed. In 1867, Congress passed the Reconstruction Acts, reorganizing the govern-ments of states that had second from the Union. Those former rebels who refused to reconcile themselves to the federal victory were called "unreconstructed," and the word has retained that connotation of a refusal to recognize the outcome of a war. Hence, "unreconstructed cold warrior." New York Times Service

Maria Bill

Improvising Every Day Gave Me Exactly What I Needed: The Freedom to Try Everything and Fail'

By Alan Levy

ional Herald Tribun VIENNA — Within days after her Big Break last February, Maria Bill came within hours of another big break: a ruptured appendix.

. A well regarded but little known actress of 33, she had just scored a sensation at the Wiener Schauspielhaus for her singing debut in the title role of the first German version of "Piaf," by Pam Gems — singing in French, acting in German. Viennese critics hailed "an act of genius," "a bombshell," "a legendary eve-ning," (This week she won Vienna's Kainz prize as best female stage performer of the last season.)

Despite the exhilaration of success, the Swiss-born actress feit no pep, just exhaustion. Perhaps it was the part, she thought: three hours virtually alone in the center of a three-quarters arena stage. 'It couldn't be nerves. I don't have any. Could I be pregnant?" she wondered. For most of the last five years, she has been living with the show's director, Michael Schottenberg. "I wouldn't have minded," she says now.

After the eighth performance, "I had a stomach ache, but I thought it was because I hadn't eaten all day. I felt so bad that, when Schottie suggested we go eat, I said something that had never occurred to me: I think I'd rather go to a hospital." The doctors diagnosed appendicitis. Contrary to tradition, the show did not go on - there was no understudy, no show without her.

Back Onstage Quickly Within hours after awakening from the surgery, she knew she was cured: "I felt better than I had throughout the whole show." She was out of the hospital in three days and back on the boards in three weeks, though the doctors had advised six week of rest. She gave 18 more sellout performances before "Piaf" had to yield to the Schauspielhaus's next attraction, but a return engagement began Sept. 7.

Maria Bill, who at 5 feet 3 is taller than the late Edith Piaf. was born and raised in an international children's village for war orphans near Trogen in the German-speaking canton of Appenzell. Her father was the director of the village, and his four daugh-ters were educated multilingually with the house parents' children and the "orphings," as Maria Bill calls them in the homemade lingo with which the kids communicated. Consciously, at least, she never looked back to their past or hers in preparing the role of Piaf, for my youth was too idyllic for

One day when she was in her teens, students from the Zurich Schauspielakademie performed in a nearby village. Maria Bill was enchanted, and she "saw that they were just a couple of years older than me; they were kids, too; they were human and one could touch them. Or be them."

Her parents insisted that she learn a useful profession first. But at 20, after getting a teacher's certificate, she was accepted by the Zurich Schauspielakademie. She had completed two years of the three-year program when she was offered a part in a Swiss tele-vision series. "I had to ask the school's permission to act on the side. They refused. I took the job anyway. They kicked me out, though later the director wrote me a letter of recommendation certifying that I was an actress." She was engaged hy Zurich's Theater am Neumarkt, where three years of playing sappy inge-nues sapped her self-confidence. "When I started getting lesser roles and losing out to new-comers, I began to look around." Facing banishment to a provincial satellite troupe where, she was told, she could "do more work and find yourself," she jumped instead to Jacques Lecog's School of Mime, Movenent and Theatre in Paris.

"Improvising every day gave me exactly what I needed the freedom to try everything and fail. In a school like Lecoq's, it doesn't matter to be bad. If you have to be good the whole time and show others you are able, then you limit yourself. You cannot really relax and play with your fantasies or find the best way. When you see yourself fail and see others fail and find out why, you learn so much. I regained my courage with Lecoo. I still have fears. I'm afraid almost every night, but just enough to help me perform. Before Lecoq, the fear was getting greater than I

If anything in her past formed her Piaf, it was the two years with Lecoq — with the incidental bonus of perfecting her French. Her walks through the streets and red-light districts to her room near Pigalle would inspire her later to insert Pial's "Sous le ciel de Paris" into the script.

She found herself back in Zurich in 1976, working for a tiny theater in the basement of the Schauspielakademie and putting together an act with another Lecoq alumnus, a clown named Bello, who was giving mime training to a touring Austrian troupe. Bello took her to see the visitors' production of Paul Foster's "Elizabeth I" - starring Krista Stadler, a superb Viennese actress - and "it had such sparkle and spontaneity and imagination that I was inflamed." She asked the director, Hans Gratzer, to take her along with Bello. He engaged her as a walk-on; by the time they reached Berlin she had a six-line part and when they arrived in Vienna in mid-1977, Gratzer gave her a contract to work at his new base, the Schauspielhaus.

Solid Relationship

During the tour, at Eastertime, in a German supermarket, she fell in love with Schottenberg, a puckish actor with the troupe who had been around for months. Out of this came a relationship solid enough to survive Gratzer's decision -- based on nothing more than her afterhours songfests and Schotten-berg's faith in her — to cast her as Piaf and hire him to direct.

"At first, I thought it might be difficult to live and work together so closely, but it was good for me because I was never afraid to sing. After all, he'd heard me singing in the bathtub and the kitchen. I'd learned at Lecoq that, when you have a director you don't know, you sometimes feel pressure from within to show him he chose right. But I knew Schottie trusted me completely. Anytime I had doubts or faltered, he'd say quietly, 'I know that you can continue,' and I did." Though she listened to Piaf records for days ou end, she belts out the chansons in a voice more. smoky than sparrowlike, and said she ultimately found her own song interpretations and dramatic character by taking a cue from Piaf, who once said: "When I sing the song, it's me."

When the return engagement ends Oct. 23, it won't only be because the Schauspielhaus has another booking. She and Schotten-berg will redo "Piaf" in proscenium format for a six-city tour of Switzerland that starts in early
